Conclusion: “ There was a real railway accident, “ said Aslan softly.
“Your father and mother and all you are—as you used to call it in Shaadowlands—dead. The term is over: the holidays have begun. The dream is ended: this the morning”

And as He spoke He no longer looked to them like a lion; but the things that began to happen after that were so great and beautiful that I cannot write them. And for us this is the end of all the stories, and we can most truly say they all lived happily ever after. But for them it was only the beginning of the real story. All their life in this world and all their adventure in Narnia had only been the cover and the title page: now at last they were beginning Chapter One of the Great Story which no one on earth has read: which goes on forever: in which every chapter is better that the one before.” (C.S. Lewis, The last battle , 228)
